GAME BREAKDOWN: The Giants' patchwork defense will have their hands full in this one. With their injury-plagued secondary still rounding into form, not to mention their banged up linebacking corps, Tampa's underwhelming offense scored 27 points against them in New York. The Panthers got their offense back on track in a home win over New Orleans last week, rushing 41 times for 219 yards as they steamrolled their way to a 35-27 victory. Eli Manning was strong in the Giants' comeback against Tampa, finishing the victory with a career-high 510 yards, but also had three first-half interceptions to put them in a hole.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Rams look to build on their momentum after a solid first two games of the Jeff Fisher era. After nearly upsetting the Lions in Detroit, St. Louis got on the board with a come-from-behind home victory over Washington in Week 2. Fisher might be starting to change the culture there. The Bears are coming off a Thursday night stinker in Green Bay, but did have the extra prep time to correct a disastrous offensive performance. They seem likely to be without top RB Matt Forte (ankle) for this one though. St. Louis's top runner is also questionable, as Steven Jackson suffered a groin injury in Week 2.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Bills bounced back to dominate K.C. at home last week. They had five sacks, forced three turnovers and ran for 201 yards in a 35-17 win. Cleveland's two rookie cornerstones faltered badly in a season-opening loss, but QB Brandon Weeden (322 yards, no turnovers) and RB Trent Richardson (145 yards, 2 TDs on 23 touches) were much better in last week's loss at Cincinnati. Buffalo has lost eight in a row SU on the road (1-6-1 ATS). The Browns have lost three in a row at home SU, but the last two have been winnable, a one-point loss to Philly in the opener and a four-point loss to Pittsburgh in last year's finale.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Cowboys offense looked excellent against the Giants in their opener before getting shut down in Seattle in Week 2. But QB Tony Romo could take advantage against a Tampa defense that allowed Eli Manning to throw for 510 yards in last week. The Bucs strongly prefer a clock-killing, run-first attack. It didn't work against the Giants in Week 2 (79 yards on 22 rushes), but the Cowboys struggled to stop the Seahawks' ground game last week (182 yards on 41 carries) and also allowed 82 rush yards to a very weak Giants running game in the opener.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Dolphins have won five of six (SU and ATS) at home, including last week's 35-13 victory over Oakland. When these two teams met in Miami in last year's season finale, a game the Jets needed, the Dolphins won 19-17 despite being out-gained 374-210 as Mark Sanchez threw three INTs. The Jets are 2-7 SU and ATS on the road since the beginning of 2011. Sanchez and the offense struggled in Pittsburgh last week, with Sanchez completing just 10-of-27 (37.0%) in the loss. Rookie QB Ryan Tannehill figures to have a tough time against the Jets' exotic blitz schemes, especially if CB Darrelle Revis (concussion) is back in the lineup.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Niners look to continue their early-season dominance. San Fran scored a road win over Green Bay to start the year, and had a convincing win over Detroit at home last week despite an uncharacteristic turnover (fumbled kickoff return) costing them three points. Surprisingly, the Niners had failed to cover in their previous four road games before the Green Bay victory. The Vikings obviously rely heavily on Adrian Peterson and the run game to set up their passing game, but the Niners continue to have the best run defense (and all-around defense) in the NFL (allowing three TDs combined to Detroit and Green Bay).

GAME BREAKDOWN: These teams are licking their wounds coming into this game. The Chiefs are once again a team that lacks any explosiveness offensively (aside from garbage time) and through two weeks hasn't stopped anyone on defense (they've allowed 68 points to opposing offenses). The Saints certainly have the offense to take advantage, but they've been unable to stop anyone. Their issues have been against athletic quarterbacks (Robert Griffin III and Cam Newton), something that Matt Cassel is not, but the Chiefs do have the kind of smashmouth running game that could give the Saints fits.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Bengals now have two weeks of tape to watch on the Skins' new, Robert Griffin III-led offense. RG3 nearly pulled off a second road win last week, as a last-second drive in St. Louis was diffused by a personal foul penalty. The 'Skins have been relying on big plays, and Cincinnati allowed 300-yard passing games in each of their first two games. Cincinnati is just 0-3-2 ATS over their last five road games. After struggling to move the ball in the second half of their opener at Baltimore, they did put up 34 points in their victory over Cleveland, but they continue to struggle in pass protection (10 sacks allowed).

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Titans have been a trainwreck, getting outscored by 49 points over their first two games. They've been arguably the worst offensive team in football so far, especially with RB Chris Johnson struggling horrendously (19 carries, 21 yards). Tennessee WR Kenny Britt (knee) could be ready for a bigger role this week. The Lions haven't been their sharpest, falling behind in each of their first two games (a comeback win over St. Louis and a loss at San Fran). The Titans' pass defense offered little resistance against Tom Brady and Philip Rivers. They figure to have issues matching up with Detroit's weapons.

GAME BREAKDOWN: These teams already have a shared opponent. Andrew Luck got his first win last week, at home over Minnesota thanks to a late field goal. After turning it over five times in the opener, Indy didn't turn it over in Week 2. The Jags lost at Minnesota in a similar fashion in Week 1 before reverting to last year's form in a blowout home loss to Houston. QB Blaine Gabbert played (poorly) through nagging injuries for most of that game before calling it a day in the third quarter. If he can't play, veteran QB Chad Henne starts. GAME BREAKDOWN: The Eagles have turned it over nine times, but are 2-0 thanks to a high-powered offense, a very good defense and some timely playmaking. Arizona is coming off an upset in New England, beating the Pats despite just 245 yards of offense thanks to an improved D (four sacks of Tom Brady) and strong special teams (including a blocked punt). The Cards came to Philly last November and upset the then red-hot Eagles behind some John Skelton heroics. Skelton (ankle) will likely miss this game. Arizona also beat up Michael Vick last year, sacking him twice, intercepting two passes and holding him to 128 passing yards.

GAME BREAKDOWN: San Diego is 2-0 despite a rash of injuries. They torched the Titans last week despite being without TE Antonio Gates, RB Ryan Mathews and LT Jared Gaither. There's a good chance Mathews and Gates will be back for this game. The Falcons will present the first major test for San Diego's suspect secondary though, as WRs Julio Jones and Roddy White will present a far tougher challenge than Oakland's and Tennessee's injury-ravaged receiving groups did. The Falcons have fared very well against the AFC in recent years, going 14-4 SU and 13-4-1 ATS against AFC opponents since 2008.

GAME BREAKDOWN: Houston is staking its claim to be the AFC's best defense. They'll be in a chess match with Peyton Manning. While Manning's arm strength isn't back (leading to three INTs in Atlanta), he's still capable of manipulating defenses with the best of them. Denver nearly came back to win in Atlanta Monday night despite four early turnovers. Denver's run defense will be in for a challenge against Houston's elite running game. They dominated a good Jacksonville D for 216 rushing yards last week, on the road. Houston is averaging 39 minutes of possession per game, a potential advantage in keeping their defense fresh in Denver's thin air.

But they're coming off disastrous performances in the first two weeks, piling up penalties and mistakes in a Week 1 home loss to San Diego and embarrassment last week in Miami. GAME BREAKDOWN: The Pats are coming off their worst game in recent memory, looking completely out of sorts against Arizona after losing TE Aaron Hernandez (ankle). Hernandez won't play in this one. The Ravens are playing with a chip on their shoulder after they felt they were robbed in Philly last week, and because of their AFC title game loss in New England. The Ravens have lost their last two SU to the Patriots (both in New England), but got an ATS win and a push. They're 3-1-1 ATS against the Pats since 2007. Baltimore's no-huddle was a hit in their opener at home against Cincy, but was less effective in Philly last week.

GAME BREAKDOWN: The Seahawks just dominated the Cowboys at home last week, and now they'll have a chance to surprise a Packers offense that isn't quite hitting on all cylinders yet. The Pack did get some extra prep time after playing a Thursday nighter last week, a win over Chicago behind a great defensive performance. They've faced two great defenses in San Francisco and Chicago, both at home, and their offense has managed as many turnovers as touchdowns (three). Seattle is playing conservatively on offense with rookie QB Russell Wilson under center, but their defense has been excellent through the first two games.

StatFox Dave

StatFox Dave is one of the original four founders of StatFox and over the years has been renowned for his handicapping prowess in all sports. Anyone who signed up for our NBA postseason Best Bets certainly knows that to be true, as Dave racked up an astounding 66% success rate on Best Bets during the NBA postseason. Dave is known to step out and pick games that are not on the national radar, and he not only thought Ball State would cover at Indiana last Saturday, but predicted the Cardinals would win outright. Sure enough, Ball State racked up 440 yards of offense in its road win.

StatFox Gary

StatFox Gary joined the StatFox and Platinum Sheet staff prior to the 2010 football season, and subscribers were certainly happy he did: He proceeded to post a 55% success rate on NFL Best Bets in his "rookie" season. Gary also has a knack for picking college games, usually focusing on the most prominent matchups each week. He went 2-for-2 in his Best Bets involving ACC teams last week, correctly picking Louisville to cover a small spread against UNC, and Georgia Tech to win handily over Virginia because of a superior running game: Tech outrushed UVa 461-98.

StatFox Scott

StatFox Scott serves as Managing Editor for StatFox and Platinum Sheet and the Edge Football Preview Guide, and is coming off a two-year college football run in which his Best Bets success rate was 56%. Scott's big play last week was East Carolina at Southerm Missississippi, starting that the two teams were "much more evenly matched than the 7.5-point spread would indicate; I certainly wouldn't be shocked if East Carolina won outright." Sure enough, East Carolina scored 24 unanswered points en route to a double-digit victory.

StatFox Brian

A featured writer on StatFox.com and for Platinum Sheet, StatFox Brian has yet to suffer a losing season of Platinum Sheet Best Bets in either college football, NFL, college basketball or NBA since coming on board in 2010. He's been on fire so far in 2012, going a perfect 3-for-3 in college football ATS Best Bets two weeks ago, and then continuing his hot streak with his third straight winning ATS Best Bets week (2-1). His best pick was Penn State giving a touchdown to Navy and winning, 34-7, which put Brian at 7-2 ATS for the season.

StatFox Forecaster

By weighing several key factors, including recent statistical averages, schedule strength and home-field advantage, the StatFox Forecaster has proven to be an extremely successful long-term handicapping tool. It's most accurate once a season is underway, as evident by an ATS success rate of 61% (123-79-6) on all 2011 NFL regular-season games played between September 25 and the end of the calendar year. With three straight winning weeks of college football in 2012, Forecaster has an ATS accuracy mark of better than 65% on the season.

THE PLATINUM SHEET — StatFox College Football Power Rating Lines - Week 4

 The StatFox Power Ratings are determined from a formula that is takes into account several key factors, including point margins, difficulty of schedule, team statistics and more. The ratings are typically not as reactive as those you will find elsewhere, and thus prove to be a great long term handicapping tool. Here are the StatFox Power Rating lines and edges for this week's games, with our exclusive home field advantage points built into each home team's rating and corresponding line. Note that the point edge between the Power Rating Line and the actual opening line is denoted for the team with the edge. Use the W/L column to keep track of the winners and losers.

OL - Opening Line
PR - StatFox Power Rating - adjusted for home field advantage.

Statfox College Football Outplay Factor Rating Lines - Week 4

 The Outplay Factor Ratings made famous by StatFox are a great Team Strength Indicator as they provide a quantitative measure of how teams are outplaying (+ value) or being outplayed by (- value) their opponents. They are determined by a complicated formula that takes into account a team's points for/against as compared to how their previous opponents have fared. Here are the StatFox Team Outplay Factor Ratings and the corresponding game lines derived from them. Note that the point edge between the Outplay Factor Rating Line and the actual opening line is denoted for the team with the edge. Use the W/L column to keep track of the winners and losers.
