Washington has been in a scoring slump during its four-game SU losing skid (82.0 PPG), mainly due to cold shooting from three (23.9%). But the Pacers have done a terrible job at defending the three-pointer in the past three games, allowing 44% (25-of-57) from downtown. The Wizards will be well-rested, while Indiana will have zero rest, a scenario in which it is just 7-10 ATS this season. The Pacers are also 2-5 ATS when favored by 9+ points this season.

Over the past week, Oklahoma City may have established itself as the best team in the NBA. The Thunder hammered the Clippers at home two Wednesdays ago, beat the Timberwolves in a wild one, handed Miami its worst loss of the season, then went to Portland and put the Blazers away with ease. The Lakers, meanwhile, are clashing with their head coach and have failed to cover in their past five home games, including an SU loss to Memphis on Sunday.
